What you need to know

Firstly, Accordant is priced on space (square feet or square meters) not on how many users you have. There is no limit to the number of people that can access or make changes to the system. Our pricing shouldn't prevent you from effectively managing your workplace.

Now let's take a look at how the system can be used. It has a simple interface incorporating visual floor plans with drag-and-drop changes for quick updates. Any employee can easily start using the software with just a short how to guide or quick video. Workplace planners need a minimal amount of training and can often begin using the system after just a couple of hours show and tell. Being 100% web-based means that no matter what your users device, browser or technology preferences are, the information they need is readily available.

Taking it back a few steps, you are looking for a software tool to help with a particular challenge you are facing. It could be a big move that you need to plan, to accurately report on space, to assess your office occupancy or utilization, whatever the reason this is something you need to address now. With Accordant the software set up usually takes just a few weeks.

A lot of companies will already have some systems in place before they start considering a space management system. With open API we can easily interface with other softwares, such as HR systems, to make sure your data is kept up-to-date.
